Rogers Lake is seen in the distance.
